Hors-ligne v1.4.4.exe process from the firewall. When you ask why I would turn off windows 7 activation hors-ligne v1.4.4.exe process? First, we will not disable Windows activation, but remove the activation so it will be possible to use the full version on two different computers at the same time. We will remove the serial number from the computer to avoid a situation where a company could take back the operating system to be applied on the client's device. This is an important aspect that is to know that if the activation on your Windows is lost, the operating system can be taken back by the company. It will be possible to avoid this situation by removing the serial number of the operating system, without the risk of losing the activation. Another aspect is that turning off Windows activation may allow you to uninstall certain programs or add or remove certain programs on your computer without being blocked. The end user will be able to uninstall an antivirus program for example, which would normally not be possible if the activation on the operating system was not removed. The new "Lemédec" activation In the past, the activation on Windows required the operating system be connected to the manufacturer's server. The operating system on the client device would be activated by this central server. With the new "Lemédec" activation, the user's device automatically validates against the "Lemédec" server. This new system does not require the client to have network access to the server to obtain the activation. Lemédec® is the name of this new activation system and the first party ID is V1.0.0.0. Lemédec® can be removed, and the operating system will still remain valid for at least 30 days after the removal, but it will then be possible to remove the activation once again and it will require at least 30 days to have an activation again. Which is the difference between the old and new "Lemédec" activation system? The activation of the new Lemédec system is not checked by the Microsoft server before giving the activation, but by the user's device. The activation can be removed immediately, and if the removal is repeated within a period of 30 days, the activation will automatically be turned off by Microsoft. Lemédec® can be considered to be the second party ID 82157476af
